Columbus and Muscogee County have been blessed with individuals and groups who have worked and are working in local history. Formal histories such as John H. Martin's Columbus, Geo., published in 1874, Nancy Telfair's [Louise Gunby Jones Dubose] History of Columbus, written for the 1928 centennial, Etta Blanchard Worsley's Columbus on the Chattahoochee (1951) and more recent books by Joseph B. Mahan, John S. Lupold, Clason Kyle and Mary Jane Galer, provide the foundation and a lot of the structure of local history. But other laborers have added wings and rooms to the building: Billy H. Winn, Craig Lloyd, Buster Wright, Dolores Autry, Ken Thomas, Callie McGinnis, Reagan Grimsley, and Linda Kennedy. Daniel Olds continues this work in his index to deaths reported in Columbus newspapers, the second installment of which is published in this issue. Occasionally, organizations provide support and give direction as was the case with the nowadays little known Historical Society of Columbus, Georgia, the subject of an article in this issue. We are all in the debt of researchers past and present who provide us with information and guidance in the sometimes frustrating but always interesting work of local history and genealogy. Add your contribution!

THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF COLUMBUS, GEORGIA, 1915-1962

by

Hugh I. Rodgers

Nearly fifty years before local preservation activists formed the Historic Columbus Foundation and more than sixty years before genealogy enthusiasts organized the Genealogical Society of Original Muscogee County (now called the Muscogee Genealogical Society), the Historical Society of Columbus gave public expression to an abiding interest in the history of this area. Unsurprisingly, given the strong regional fascination with the War between the States and the "Lost Cause", the Historical Society of Columbus focused on the events and personalities of the War as related to Columbus. What is perhaps more unexpected is the interest and support shown by Chamber of Commerce and business leaders generally in the work of the Society and their expectation that wider recognition of Columbus history would bring commercial benefit. [1]

Lucius H. Chappell (1853-1928), the progressive mayor of Columbus, 1897-1907,1911-1913, often called "the father of modern Columbus," provided the leadership in organizing the Historical Society.[2] In the late months of 1914, Chappell circulated the idea among several people in city government and in the Chamber of Commerce and contacted the Georgia Historical Society in Savannah. The GHS was "glad to know that Columbus is to have a historical society" and enclosed a copy of the state society's constitution and by laws for guidance.[3] Chappell enlisted the support of John T. Davis (1863-1929) of the Chamber of Commerce (which became in effect the midwife of the Society) in issuing a call on December 28, 1914, for an organizing committee. The committee met two days later and again on January 2, 1915, when 128 citizens, including members of the Chamber, signed a petition to the Superior Court of Muscogee County to incorporate "The Historical Society of Columbus, Georgia." The court granted the Charter on February 1, 1915.[4] Nine days later, John T. Davis presided at an evening

[1]Memorializing the War and the Lost Cause became a virtual literary and artistic industry in the South. For treatment of this phenomenon see chapters 8 and 10 of Gaines M. Foster, Ghosts of the Confederacy: Defeat, the Lost Cause and the Emergence of the New South, 1865-1914 (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1988); a more recent investigation is Monuments to the Lost Cause: Women, Art, and the Landscape of Southern Memory, Cynthia Mills and Pamela Simpson, eds. meeting held in the Public Library of about 100 charter members to complete the organizing process.[5]

The organizing committee had done its work well. Not only did it have an official Charter, it had a constitution and set of by-laws by the time a cross section of Columbus' social, business and political elite gathered to formally consider the organization. A temporary secretary, Leland J. Henderson[6], read the proposed society rules which the group adopted with minor change. An appointed committee of five nominated the first Board of Directors; the meeting quickly accepted the fifteen names: John S. Bleecker (an executive with Columbus Railroad Co., Columbus Power Co. and Gas Light Co.), Miss Maude Dismukes, Dr. Isaac S. McElroy (minister, First Presbyterian Church), G. Gunby Jordan, Mrs. W. W. Stewart (Euphan Collier Stewart, wife of Dr. W. W.), W. C. Woodall, A. C. Smith, Charles J. Swift, L. H. Chappell, John T. Davis, Hamlin Ford (vice president of the Dan Joseph Co.), Miss Edwina Wood, Miss Mary Lewis Redd (daughter of Judge William Redd), Miss Anna C. Benning (daughter of General Benning), and Dr. Frank L. Rosenthal. Under the Society's constitution, the Board of Directors was to select the officers, but Charles J. Swift moved that the meeting recommend L. H. Chappell as the first president. The motion passed and was then made unanimous "by a rising vote".[7]

The Constitution spelled out the purposes of the Society: to mark places of historical interest in Columbus, to preserve and publish a record of historical events, to properly observe anniversaries of events of local interest, to recognize citizens of Columbus who had achieved fame in "literature, art, statesmanship, invention, industry, army, navy", and to foster civic pride and encourage the study of history. These generalities were clarified over time to include erecting monuments and establishing a museum of historical artifacts.[8] While not mentioned, the Society's aims would also serve the Chamber of Commerce's need to promote Columbus as an interesting place to visit and do business.

The Society operated as an indirect democracy with the members electing the Board of Directors who then elected the officers. One became a member by election of a majority of the existing members and payment of a fee of $1.00; annual dues of up to $5.00 might be charged. In due course, the Society provided members with a beautifully embellished certificate of membership. The Society was to meet annually on the first Tuesday in February for elections and in May, August, and November for other business, although the paucity of minutes suggests the group met fairly irregularly.

At this first meeting of the Historical Society two people were scheduled to read papers touching on major aspects of Columbus history. James D. Massey (vice president of the Eagle and Phenix Mill) did not in fact deliver his paper on "The Cotton Mill Industry in Columbus" but promised to submit a sketch later for the records of the Society. Instead he urged what today would be called "oral history": "tactful committees" to interview the "pioneers of Columbus" for their memoirs of early days and to create a book for the schools to teach the "youth of Columbus" about the history of their city.[9]

THE LAST BATTLE OF THE CIVIL WAR

PAPER READ BY
CHARLES JEWETT SWIFT

AT THE ORGANIZING OR FIRST MEETING OF
THE COLUMBUS HISTORICAL SOCIETY,
WEDNESDAY NIGHT, FEBRUARY 10th, 1915.

"Nothing in the past is dead to him who would learn how the present came to be what it is."

COLUMBUS, GA.

Charles Jewett Swift did read his paper on what became the major focus of the Historical Society of Columbus: "Columbus: the Scene of the Last Battle of the Civil War." [10] The newspaper report of the meeting declared Swift's paper "a complete collection of facts" based on official documents concerning the battle of Columbus on April 16, 1865, and "denoted much research".[11] The topic remained for decades the central concern of the Society.

The first Board of Directors met on February 18, 1915, and proceeded to elect the officers of the Historical Society. L. H. Chappell had already been acclaimed President, a post he held until 1928. The Directors chose Dr. Frank. L. Rosenthal (1865-1940), Rabbi of B'nai Israel congregation, as Vice President, Leland J. Henderson as Secretary, and Miss Edwina Wood (1876-1965), formidable figure in Columbus primary education, as Treasurer. The Directors then adopted a resolution to commemorate the "last Battle of the Civil War in Columbus, April 16, 1865" and to erect a monument "costing no less than $10,000".[12] Since that was a handsome sum in1915 the Directors must have envisioned a monument of truly grandiose scale. Chappell thought an island in the Chatthoochee River would be the ideal spot for the monument and requested the City to clear the island of rubbish and undergrowth.[13] The city fathers took no action.

Commemorating the 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Columbus on April 16, 1915, became the immediate task of the Historical Society. The idea of a pageant with a parade, speeches, and the assembly of surviving veterans of that battle, took center stage. Chappell and others embarked on a serious letter-writing campaign to obtain flags of states and military units suitable for use by horsemen. Several of the governors responded that their states had no flag; Alabama's was "too large" and Georgia's governor reported he was out of flags. Only the states of Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Tennessee, and North Carolina sent banners. Congressman William C. Adamson made inquiries in Washington. But on March 16, 1915, the Assistant Secretary of War declined to loan unit flags to the Historical Society of Columbus for a pageant. The Naval Department agreed to send 100 signal flags. [14]

The historical pageant on the theme of the last battle took place during a three day "Columbus Homecoming Festival" in mid-April, 1915, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. A number of lovely young ladies took part in the pageant. G. Gunby Jordan crowned the queen and both local newspapers enthused over the event.[15] The Chamber was also pleased by the large crowds that spent money in Columbus.

While planning the historical pageant, the Historical Society and the Chamber of Commerce agreed to seek Congressional support for a monument to the "last battle." Chappell appointed a Monument Committee consisting of himself and Directors W. C. Woodall, Mrs. W. W. Stewart, Miss Edwina Wood and Dr. I. S. McElroy. Although Chappell warned that the effort would "likely extend over a period of several years," he probably did not estimate that nearly a quarter century would pass before Columbus had a monument.[16]

The Society and its Board of Directors met only sporadically during the 1920s. As early as 1917, the Georgia Historical Society had encouraged the Columbus body to collaborate in locating and classifying records of historical interest but little happened.[17] As one officer lamented in 1928, efforts to "carry out the objects of the society...have not been highly successful".[18] In 1922, the "last battle" got a minor commemoration with the installation of bronze plaques on each end of the new Fourteenth Street

Bridge. But the Society may have been only indirectly involved. Miss Anna Caroline Benning (1853-1935), member of the Historical Society's Board of Directors and president of the local UDC chapter, presided at the dedication of the markers.[19]

After a lengthy hiatus, the society met on Flag Day, June 14, 1927, and elected a new Board of Directors. Some new figures took their places among some who continued: Prof. Roland B. Daniel (1866-1955), who in 1906 became the first principal of Jordan Industrial High School and subsequently for 31 years the Superintendent of Columbus City Schools; Julia Collier Harris (1875-1967) noted writer and wife of editor Julian Harris; Mrs. Louise Gunby Dubose (1901-1985), poet, author, future director of the University of South Carolina Press; J. Homer Dimon (1869-1951) who served as a progressive mayor of Columbus 1922-1933. Other new faces included Frank D. Foley (1888-1944), F. W. Garrard, W. W. Ellison and Mrs. Joseph Clark. Besides Chappell, the familiar carry-overs included G. Gunby Jordan (1846-1930), described by one historian as the "city's most powerful and most public citizen" and a Chappell supporter; W. C. Woodall (1877-1971) newspaperman, local historian and Society activist throughout its existence; Alva C. Smith (1883-1965), indefatigable collector of items of local history and from 1928-1962 the Secretary of the Society (after Chappell, probably the Society's staunchest supporter); Miss Edwina Wood, Mrs. W. W. Stewart and Dr. F. L. Rosenthal also continued on the Board.[20]

Responding to an inquiry from the United Daughters of the Confederacy, City Manager H. B. Crawford asked the Historical Society for advice about erecting a monument to Captain C. C. McGehee (1839-1916) who had led his men in firing the Dillingham Street Bridge on April 16, 1865, an action taken to delay the invasion of Columbus by Union troops.[21] The city manager was unsure whether this action rose to that level of "heroism and patriotism involving grave personal risk and danger" usually required for such public recognition. At a meeting of the Society on June 14, Dr. F. L. Rosenthal presented a lengthy resolution supporting the proposed monument. The resolution cited Martin's account of the incident in his History of Columbus: "McGehee acted with conspicuous gallantry while a number of his men were killed" as evidence of his heroism. The resolution stated such a monument would be "an impressive reminder" that "here on the banks of the Chattahoochee was fought the last battle of the war between the states." The Society concluded it would be "eminently proper" to place McGehee's monument in one of the city's streets or parks.[22] In the event, the City failed to take action. A more pressing project loomed: Columbus and the Society readied for the City's Centennial.

The City Board of Commissioners, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Historical Society, along with numerous civic and fraternal organizations and Fort Benning, joined forces to celebrate the city's Centennial in 1928. Society President L. H. Chappell served on the Program Committee of the Columbus Centennial Association.[23] Louise Gunby DuBose, member of the Historical Society Board, prepared and published the centennial history. Among the events of April, 1928, was a historical pageant staged for three nights at Memorial Stadium. Miss Loretto Chappell (1895-1987), daughter of L. H. Chappell and already well into her remarkable career as Librarian, wrote a brief history of Columbus for the centennial edition of the local newspapers.[24]

As part of the Centennial observance, L. H. Chappell led the Historical Society in organizing an exhibition of historical artifacts, pictures, photographs and documents in a building at 1013 Broadway. The famous "Ladies Defender" cannon, the "Red Jacket" brass cannon, and the breech-loading naval gun manufactured in Columbus attracted attention. The exhibit proved popular and was open to the public for four days in April from 9:00 AM to 11:00 PM. The Historical Society's ledger book, pages 1 through 101, are filled with more than 4,000 signatures of the visitors to the exhibit.[25] This success led the Society at its meeting in June, 1928, to take up an earlier suggestion of Chappell's that the organization support the creation of a permanent museum.

A. C. Smith read the resolution:

> Whereas in view of the great interest manifested by the citizens of Columbus and visitors in the Historical exhibits displayed under the auspices of the Historical Society during the Centennial Celebration, it is apparent that a permanent museum of Historical records and objects of historical interest would be a valuable addition to the educational facilities of Columbus; and whereas: There remains in the treasury of the Centennial Corporation an unexpended balance of about forty-five Hundred dollars....
> Therefore it is resolved: That attention of the Centennial Corporation be directed...that said unexpended balance would serve a valuable purpose if it should be expended or invested in the establishment of a Historical Museum to be under the management of the Board of Education or of such other Board as may be designated by the Commissioners of the City of Columbus.

The society adopted the resolution and sent copies to the Centennial Corporation and to the Mayor of Columbus.[26] When the museum came into existence about twenty years later, it was under the supervision of the Board of Education as the Society had suggested..

L. H. Chappell now stepped down as president of the Society, a position he had held since 1915, but he continued on the Board of Directors until his death later in 1928. In his distinguished civic career he had contributed much to Columbus. Two new members joined the Board: Mrs. B. H. Hardaway and Dr. C. A. Dexter.[27] The lack of records does not permit a precise date for the election of new officers, but by the 1930s the Society's stationary listed William Clyde Woodall as president. He remained the Society's second (and last) President until its demise in the 1960s.

W. C. Woodall (1878-1971), a native of Talbot County, moved with his parents to Columbus as a child. He became a widely known and beloved newspaperman and his columns in the Columbus Enquirer attracted a strong following for several decades. He helped found The Industrial Index, a journal devoted to business, industrial and construction activities in the Southeast. He served on the Board of Education and contributed to a history of public education in Columbus. Columbus residents came to regard the President of the Historical Society as the city's "unofficial historian". He published a collection of his memoirs in 1937 entitled Home Town.[28] His portrait hangs today in Woodall Hall on the campus of Columbus State University.

The Secretary (later, Secretary-Treasurer) of the Society from 1928 until 1962, Alva C. Smith, had two great loves: politics and history. Born in Columbus in 1885, A. C. Smith received his education in the public schools and at Massey Business College. He held managerial or bookkeeping positions with several Columbus firms including the Eagle & Phenix Mills, the Columbus Automatic Telephone Company, Leo Loeb & Company, J. B. Banks & Son, and Southern Coal Company. He joined a number of fraternal and civic clubs and was a charter member of the Kiwanis Club of Columbus. The politics of the Democratic Party became an early and enduring interest for Alva C. Smith. He went to several state and four national conventions, supported Eugene Talmadge, and as a part of Talmadge's staff, attended Franklin D. Roosevelt's second inauguration. His brother, Hattox C. Smith, also active in politics, served a term as mayor of Columbus.

ALVA C. SMITH

The other great passion of Smith's life was local history. He was an inveterate collector of artifacts, clippings, and photographs, especially photographs of steamboats. He kept and made available to writers "the official list of steamers plying the Chattahoochee River". He was a charter member of the Historical Society of Columbus and along with Chappell and Woodall one of its most active officers.[29] He tenaciously lobbied politicians and government bureaucracies in the 1930s to realize the Society's major aim: a monument to the "last battle".

It is fitting that Smith's two "hobbies", politics and history, dovetailed nicely in his struggle for a monument.[30] Because of his involvement in state Democratic politics he had access to Congressional Representatives from the area and to the two U. S. Senators from Georgia, the keys to his ultimate success. In 1931, 1932, and 1933, Smith traveled to Washington to confer with Georgia Senator William J. Harris and Representatives W. T. Wright and Charles R. Crisp. Smith also conferred with the historical division of the War Department and with the historical section of the Department of Interior. The latter made a "very exhaustive investigation" of the "last battle" matter and provided a report.

In 1935, armed with his research, Smith convinced Representative Bryant T. Castellow (Cuthbert, 3rd Congressional District) to introduce House Bill 6681 to appropriate $10,000 for the erection of a monument in Columbus. From this point Smith's efforts came to resemble the "perils of Pauline" of silent film fame. The bill went to the House Committee on Public Lands which asked the Secretary of the Interior for a recommendation; the latter suggested that only $1,000 be appropriated for the monument. In 1936, the bill was reintroduced in the House, passed, and made it to the Senate which passed it and on April 10, 1936. President Roosevelt signed the measure into law.[31] A veritable-if small-miracle seemed to have occurred.

In May, 1936, Smith, Prof. Roland B. Daniel, and W. C. Woodall convinced the City Commission to set aside a plot at the intersection of 14th Street and Broadway for the monument. But the way forward was not smooth. Smith had not reckoned with the torturous appropriations process in the U.S. Congress. An appropriation measure containing the monument funds was killed in July 1936 at a House-Senate Conference. In 1937, the Interior Department again sent forward a budget request containing $1,000 for the Columbus monument. It ran the gamut of House committees and then to the Senate where various amendments required another House-Senate Conference. For a few weeks in July, 1937, the measure remained in doubt, but by July 29, both houses of Congress reached agreement, and on August 9, 1937, the President signed the measure into law. Senator Richard Russell informed Smith of the successful outcome. Columbus would get, not the $10,000 originally envisaged in 1915 and requested in 1935, but the modest amount of $1,000 for a monument to the last battle.

Now followed the tedious process of getting the National Park Service architects to draft and approve blueprints and specifications for the seven feet by three feet polished granite shaft. It took from September 1937 to April 1938 as the work went through several layers of bureaucracy inside the Park Service of the Interior Department. After approval, even the bidding had to be redone on a revised set of plans and specifications. Finally, Clarks Memorials, Inc., of Macon, Georgia, got the contract on June 9, 1938. Now the pace of events speeded up.

On July 29, 1938, Camp Concrete Company of Columbus broke ground at the previously approved plot at the intersection of 14th Street and Broadway. On October 27, 1938, Olinus Smith, Supervising Engineer of the National Park Service, came from Washington to personally oversee the installation of the monument. As Smith noted with satisfaction this brought "to a close a campaign of many years"–in fact 23 years since the Historical Society had first proposed a monument to mark the Last Battle of the Civil War.[32] One side of the marker reads: "This monument was created October 1938, under Authority of an Act of Congress sponsored by the Historical Society of Columbus, Georgia, and approved April 10, 1936."

Smith next took up the challenge of getting returned the captured battle flags of Confederate units associated with Columbus and Muscogee County. This effort in 1941 proved fruitless, even with the help of Senator Walter F. George. The War Department reported that no such flags remained in its custody.[33] Inquiries to the governors of Ohio, Iowa, and Missouri elicited similar replies. The Historical Society of Columbus did succeed in obtaining the help of the Georgia Historical Society in 1956 in placing a historical marker at Columbus Mills.[34]

The Historical Society acquired new directors and one new officer in the years from the late 1930s to the early 1950s.[35] The noted artist, Edward S. Shorter (1898-1987), became the Society's Vice President. He was the grandson of Columbus pioneer industrialist George Parker Swift. Long acknowledged as the "dean of artistic interests in the Columbus area", Shorter, joined by Historical Society Board members Ruby H. Knight (Mrs J. B.) and Euphan Collier Stewart (Mrs. W. W.), and other citizens interested in art, incorporated the "Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts" on October 29, 1941. Shorter's museum opened in 1941 on the second floor of the Woman's Club on Wynnton Avenue, but it was not until after World War II that the museum got its real start. First came the1942 bequest by Georgia Collier Comer of Savannah in honor of her sister, Euphan Collier Stewart. In 1947 the W. C. Bradley estate provided additional financial backing and eventually a home for the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts. It opened in its new location in 1953. Edward Shorter served for several years as unpaid director.[36]

Given the major interests of its founders, the fledgling museum focused upon art. But another important personality added to the Board of Directors of the Historical Society, whose work contributed much to the historical content of the museum, was Isabelle Garrard Patterson (Mrs. H. Wayne Patterson). She was fascinated with the early Indian history of the central Chattahoochee Valley. As an archaeologist she pioneered the digs near the mouth of Bull Creek, and got the University of Georgia's archaeologists to the site in 1936. In 1937 she presented a paper on the Columbus area excavations to the Society of American Archaeology meeting at the Smithsonian. Her work led to the collection of Indian art and civilization in the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, a work greatly amplified after her death in 1955.[37] Just two years later, through the efforts of historian Joseph B. Mahan, the museum received the gift of Yuchi Chief S. W. Brown's Collection, a major addition to the Indian history of the region. In the following decades the Museum began to realize the purposes first broached in 1915 by L.H. Chappell and urged by the Historical Society in 1928.

Others on the Society's late Board of Directors included Edith Kyle Crawford (Mrs. Henry B.; 1886-1981), William Henry Shaw, superintendent of the consolidated Muscogee County School District, 1950-1972, Charles M. Woolfolk, insurance executive, and Miss Loretto Chappell, beloved librarian and knowledgeable local historian. Miss Chappell joined the Public Library's staff in 1915, the year her father helped organize the Historical Society. She was Librarian from 1942-1962.[38]

It is perhaps appropriate that the Historical Society's last big public role came in connection with the Civil War Centennial of 1961. Officers and Directors of the Society who served on the "Civil War Centennial Committee of the Historical Society of Columbus" included W. C. Woodall, Alva C. Smith, Loretto Chappell, Edith Kyle Crawford, and Charles M. Woolfolk. Thomas J. Sellers and Clay Lacy wrote the historical drama, "Gallant City," performed on the floor of the City Auditorium. The Columbus Guards, reactivated and outfitted with uniforms tailored by Schwobilt Clothes, proved a hit in the pageant. The 1961 performance was "a rousing success" (3,200 attended the first night) but its restaging in 1965, the centennial year of the "last battle," attracted surprisingly small crowds.[39]

Alva C. Smith spent a great deal of time fund raising for the event. A surviving bank book lists numerous firms and businesses that contributed to the Historical Society in 1960-1961. Even with the expenses connected with the Centennial (not detailed in the book), Smith showed deposits of $4,722.02 and "checks" (not listed) of $4,053.36 with a balance of $668.66 on June 1, 1961. By September the balance had declined to $157.39–at which point the record ends.[40] It is also in this time frame that Smith's health declined. Early in January, 1962, Alva C. Smith resigned his position. He had been a member of the Society for 47 years and its secretary for 34 years; he died in February, 1965.[41]

Smith had taken action a few years earlier to obtain renewal of the Society's Charter, first issued in 1915, revived and extended for twenty years in 1936. Late in 1955, Smith convinced other members of the Board to petition the Superior Court of Muscogee County for renewal of the Charter and the Society's reincorporation for thirty-five years. Superior Court Judge J. Hicks Fort granted the petition on January

Byrne was at a loss to explain the drop in interest. The Historical Society went unmentioned in this or other 1965 articles relating to the 100th anniversary of the battle.

[40]Bank book in Smith Collection, Box 30, File 2. In a penciled notation, Smith wrote that the first bank book was "in a box" on a closet shelf. It did not reach the Collection.

[41]Letter dated January 22, 1962, Smith Collection, Box 30 File 3. Smith had the Historical Society of Columbus listed in the City Directories published between 1951-1961. His obituary mentioned his wife, Willie Mae Martin Smith, a brother H. C. Smith, and a sister, Elizabeth Smith. He had no children. Columbus Ledger, 3 Feb 1965.

3, 1956. The signatories were eight in number: W. C. Woodall, Alva C. Smith, Ruby H. Knight (Mrs. J. B.), Charles M. Woolfolk, Edith Kyle Crawford, William Henry Shaw, Loretto Lamar Chappell, Edward S. Shorter.[42] This list compares sadly with the 128 members who had signed the original petition in 1915. Although the Charter extended the legal life of the Historical Society of Columbus to the year 1991, the Society proved unable to turn the temporary interest aroused by the Civil War Centennial into membership growth. The aging leadership found no way to reach out to a wider public. The Society virtually ceased its activities with the resignation of Smith in 1962; it faded from public notice before the 1965 centennial of the "battle of Columbus."[43]

As an institution the Historical Society of Columbus did not leave much in the way of a permanent legacy after nearly fifty years of existence. When compared to the Georgia Historical Society or the Atlanta Historical Society, its accomplishments seem meager indeed. Despite its proclaimed intention to "preserve and publish", no permanent collection of historical records, no newsletter or journal of local history, no history of Muscogee County resulted.. The Columbus society experienced, not sustained work in local history, but brief spasms of activity, usually in response to the Chamber of Commerce. Nevertheless, its members produced a centennial history of the city, three historical pageants (1915, 1928, 1961) and gave some impetus to forming a local museum. And, A. C. Smith did secure Federal funding for a modest monument to the "last battle of the civil war," the Society's original major goal.

By the mid-1960s other organizations with younger leadership had emerged to fulfill--and expand--interests expressed in the aims of the moribund Historical Society of Columbus: the Columbus Museum with the work of Joseph B. Mahan and others; the Confederate Naval Museum (1962, now the Port Columbus Civil War Naval Center); the Historic Columbus Foundation (1966) and the preservationist movement sparked by the drive (1963-65) to save the Springer Opera House. Within the next decade, the Muscogee Genealogical Society (1976)[44] and, somewhat later, the Historic Linwood Foundation, began their roles in preserving and fostering public interest in local history. And, as Columbus College matured in the 1970s, professional historians and librarians on its faculty expanded the purview of local history beyond the traditional themes and the traditional elites.[45] The Historical Society of Columbus was too narrowly focused and too narrowly based to survive very long the passing of its founders.

[42]Smith Collection, Box 30, file 3.

[43]Smith would doubtless have been appalled that the major ceremony marking the occasion took place in Phenix City, sponsored by the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce, rather than in Columbus. See "Phenix Ceremony to Mark 'Battle of Girard' in 1865," Columbus Ledger (Phenix City Front), 15 Apr 1965; in the same issue, Mary Margaret Byrne hinted the Columbus Chamber gave only limited support to the 1965 performance of "Gallant City."

[45]Of particular note is the work of John S. Lupold who not only wrote the sesquicentennial history of the city in 1978 but collaborated with other historians in a wide-ranging oral history project and obtained the support of the Schwob Memorial Library in establishing the Archives at Columbus State University. He also completed the herculean task of inventorying the records of several area counties. For Columbus- Muscogee County, see his Chattahoochee Valley: Sources and Resources, vol. 2, The Georgia Counties (Eufaula, AL: Historic Chattahoochee Commission, 1993).

INDEX OF DEATH NOTICES IN COLUMBUS, GEORGIA, NEWSPAPERS FROM 1 JANUARY 1898 TO 31 DECEMBER 1918, PART II

BY

Daniel B. Olds

Index of persons whose burial, death, funeral or obituary notice was printed in the Columbus, Georgia Enquirer-Sun, Saturday Evening Herald or Sunday Herald Newspaper between 01 January 1898 and 31 December 1918.
NOTE: The vast majority of persons on this list died here and were buried here. However, if a person died and/or was buried elsewhere, and they had a relative here, their names are included. If a person died elsewhere and their remains were brought here for burial their names also are included.

Following abbreviations are used:
[AA]=African American
E.S.=Enquirer-Sun Newspaper
Sat. E.H.=Saturday Evening Herald Newspaper
S.H.=Sunday Herald Newspaper

Format for data is: Last Name, First Name, Middle Initial or Name, Title, Race, Edition Date, Newspaper Name. (Unless otherwise indicated persons are Caucasian).
RESEARCHERS PLEASE NOTE: The newspapers of yesteryear, unlike modern newspapers, did not designate a specific space for the publication of death, obituary, funeral and/or burial notices. Rather, this information was printed on any page where there was room. Researchers must, therefore, read each page of each newspaper edition in order to locate the information for individuals listed in this index. The Enquirer-Sun, Saturday Evening Herald and Sunday Herald usually consisted of eight pages. The Enquirer-Sun printed one edition Tuesdays through Saturdays and two editions on Sundays.

The compiler of this index noted several "glitches" in the microfilm copy sequence. For example, the Enquirer-Sun edition of January 24, 1902 is followed by the edition of February 25, 1902. For this reason researchers are advised to always check the editions a few days before and a few days after the edition date shown in the index. In addition, no microfilm is available for January 1-9, 1900 and October 1-15, 1900.

The microfilm of the newspaper editions listed in this index, except for the period 24 Oct 1905 through 12 December 1905, are available in the Reference Section, Bradley Memorial Library, Columbus, Georgia. Special thanks to Mr. Ken Thomas, Jr. for loaning the compiler the microfilm of the 24 Oct-12 Dec 1905 period.
